BRIEF INTRODUCTION

The Bantu Online Bibliography, or BOB for short, is a bibliography with the sole aim of listing any and all works dealing with the sub-Saharan Bantu languages. It aims to be exhaustive with regard to linguistic works, as well as reliable and accurate with regard to bibliographical details. BOB is updated with regular intervals.

Note that BOB is a bibliographical survey of research, not an inventory of any existing library or collection.

ON THE CONTENTS OF BOB

There is a total of 20 577 entries in this particular version of BOB. Roughly two thirds (or 13 111) refer to linguistic works such as grammars, dictionaries, sociolinguistic surveys, technical papers on various specialised subjects, contributions to language policy debates, proverb studies, and so on. The remaining 7 466 titles comprise mainly anthropological and/or historical studies, most of which lack an explicit linguistic association. (Note though that there may be some mis-categorised items there.)

Most entries refer to published works, but there is also a number of entries referring to unpublished studies, especially theses and dissertations, but also a small number of manuscript works, widely distributed conference handouts, and so on.

The references have been grouped in three large alphabetically organised sections, namely,

- a) grammars & dictionaries,
- b) other linguistic references, and
- c) miscellaneous and unsorted references, or “the rest”.

A bibliography with a more refinedly organised thematic structure is being prepared for “proper” publication.

Even though a thematically organised bibliography is probably more useful, there are certain advantages with a simple alphabetical listing, such as not requiring detailed knowledge of the contents of each individual bibliographical item. Working with an alphabetical listing is considerably more simple and time-saving.

The major benefit, however, is that an alphabetical listing avoids excessive repetition of entries under several separate headings. It thereby reduces the size and bulkiness of the finished product. The space can instead be used for annotations and cross-references where needed.

A FEW PRELIMINARY REMARKS

In this particular version, faulty page or column breaks have not yet been corrected. Hence some entries may look oddly spliced. Such editorial maladies will be cleaned up at a later stage.

Many of the entries include annotations and cross-references. Many are also supplemented with brief references to what are here termed peripherals (short for: peripheral literature), such as book reviews, commentaries, and various rejoinders and follow-ups.

BOB aims to be as comprehensive and reliable as possible. Still, omissions and errors (such as, for instance, miscategorised references) are unavoidable in a work of this scope and size. It is hoped, however, that any such nuisances are few and far between. The present compiler would nonetheless greatly appreciate suggestions and corrections regarding the contents of BOB. They can be mailed directly to <maho@brevet.nu>.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

During the compilation of BOB, I have received help from numerous people, whose invaluable contributions have filled in many of the lacunae in my own knowledge. Those who have, in one way or other, directly contributed to the contents of this bibliography include Lotta (Harjula) Aunio, Anton Bredell, Jørgen Dalsgaard, David Fourie, Wilfrid Haacke, Harald Hammarström, Tore Janson, Karsten Legère, Abdulaziz Lodhi, Jean-Alexis Mfoutou, Thomas Ndambe, Deo Ngonyani, Derek Nurse, Gérard Philippson, Josephat Rugemalira, Bonny Sands, Thilo Schadeberg, Gilles-Maurice de Schryver, Gabi Sommer, Oliver Stegen, Christina Thornell, Erez Volk, Rainer Vossen, and Martin Walsh.

Hopefully I have not forgotten too many names. If anyone feels wrongly omitted, please drop me a mail at <maho@brevet.nu>.

Needless to say, any and all faults are my own.

GRAMMARS AND DICTIONARIES

(with a total of 3 258 references)

[Anon.] 1xxx. Short grammar of the Zigula language. Typewritten manuscripts, ref. EAF PL 8831 S5. East African Collection, library of the Univ. of Dar es Salaam. Pp 40.

Mentioned by Wald (1975:313).

[Anon.] 1xxx. Zigula vocabularies and phrases. Manuscript in the library of the East African Swahili Committee, Dar es Salaam.

Referred to by Whiteley & Gutkind (1958) and Beidelman (1967:74).

[Anon.] 1xxx. Vocabulaire lingala: lingala-français, français-lingala. Par des missionnaires (C.I.C.M.-Scheut) de Nouvelle-Anvers. Turnhout (Belgique): Impr. Henri Proost. Pp 367.

Possibly this is the same as that referred to by Doke (1945:28), though the paginations don't seem to match.

[Anon.] 1xxx. Vocabulaire lingala-français, français-lingala. Luluabourg: Impr. Mission de Scheut. Pp 344.

Referred to by Doke (1945:28).

[Anon.] 1xxx. A dictionary of Chigogo. Handwritten manuscript. Dodoma: Diocese of Central Tanganyika. Pp 145.

Referred to by Polomé (1980:13).

[Anon.] 1xxx. Fragments of a Chigogo dictionary. Manuscripts. Dodoma: Diocese of Central Tanganyika. Pp 290.

Incomplete. “Starting with Mu- and following the alphabetic order of root-initials to Z-” (Polomé 1980:13).

[Anon.] 1xxx. Kingoreme grammar. Typescript. Iramba (Tanzania).

Referred to by Schoenbrun (1997:19).

[Anon.] 1xxx. Kingoreme word list. Typescript. Iramba (Tanzania).

Referred to by Schoenbrun (1997:19).

[Anon.] 1xxx. English-Chokwe vocabulary. Luma (Congo-Léopoldville).

Referred to by Doke (1945:106).

[Anon.] 1xxx. Chokwe grammar notes. Luma (Congo-Léopoldville).

Referred to by Doke (1945:106).

[Anon.] 1xxx. Chokwe-English vocabulary. Luma (Congo-Léopoldville).

Referred to by Doke (1945:106).

[Anon.] 1xxx. Un vocabulaire français-lokele. Yakusu (Congo-Léopoldville): Baptist Mission Press. Pp 12.

Referred to by Doke (1945:24).

[Anon.] 1xxx. Grammaire kirega (dialecte kisile), non publié.

Referred to by Weier (1985:342).

[Anon.] 1xxx. Essai sur la grammaire npongue. Pp 38; 52; 48.

Written by French Catholic missionaries. Undated & unauthenticated, supplemented with two vocabulary parts (Doke 1945:6). Not sure if the spelling appears as <npongue> or <mpongue>.

[Anon.] 1xxx. Cameroons manuscript vocabulary. London: Royal Asiatic Soc.

Mentioned by Latham (1847:172). Not sure what Cameroons refers to here; either Manenguba, Duala, or possibly something else.

- [Anon.] 1xxx. Prefatory grammar notes for Kele. Yakusu (Congo-Léopoldville): Baptist Mission Press. Pp 16.
Referred to by Doke (1945:24). Could also be the same as that referred to as an "18-page manuscript on grammar of Lo-kele" by Nurse (2008:322).
- [Anon.] 1xxx. Lexique ewondo-français et français-ewondo.
Referred to by Alexandre (1981:373). Possibly this is the same as Pichon (1950).
- [Anon.] 1xxx. Esquisse grammaticale lingombe, non publié. Dactylographié. Bamanya: Bibl. Aequatoria. Pp 47.
- [Anon.] 1xxx. Tshivenda grammar notes. Typescript. Pp 31.
Undated, anonymous typescript used at some mission station. Referred to by Doke (1945:94).
- [Anon.] 1xxx. Vocabulaire français-kituba-tshiluba-tshisonge-tshikuba-tshietela. Lusambo (Congo-Léopoldville): Impr. de l'Ecole Professionnelle. Pp c.200.
Referred to by Doke (1945:35).
- [Anon.] 1xxx. Manuscript grammar of Tumbuka. Pp 82.
Referred to by Nurse (2008:322).
- [Anon.] 1680. Arte da lingua de Cafre. Lisboa: Bibl. Nacional d' Ajuda. Pp 42.
Date uncertain. Anonymous grammar of an early dialect of Sena N44. "The present state of the MS. shews a large number of unintelligent copyist's errors" (Doke 1959:59).
Peripherals: F. Paul Schebesta, "Eine Bantugrammatik aus dem 17. Jahrhundert", Anthropos, v. 14/15 (1919/20), p. 764-787; C.M. Doke, "The early literature: the age of Brusciotto", African studies, v. 18 (1959), p. 59-60.
- [Anon.] 17xx. Manuscript grammar of the Angola.
Latham (1847:190) mentions an "MS grammar of the Angola", but gives little details. He could be referring to Descourvières (1770).
- [Anon.] 1772. Dictionnaire congo-français. Manuscrit, ref. MS 33779. London: Grenville Library, British Museum. Pp 990.
Unsure about the title, assuming it has one. Anonymous manuscript of a Kakongo-French dictionary, possibly written by Father Proyard (Johnston 1919:802; cfr also Doke 1959:62f).
Peripherals: C.M. Doke, "The early literature: the age of Brusciotto", African studies, v. 18 (1959), p. 62-63.
- [Anon.] 18xx. Comparative vocabularies of Malay and various dialects. Manuscript, ref. Fol.154. London: Royal Asiatic Soc.
Includes items from Makua, erroneously thought to be a Malay dialect. The vocabularies were apparently written down by someone in Malaysia during the late nineteenth century, in Arabic script. The manuscript is listed as no 29 in the "List of Malay books bequeathed to the Soc. by the late Sir W.E. Maxwell", Journal of the Royal Asiatic Soc. of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, third series, 1899, p. 123.
Peripherals: C. Otto Blagden, "A comparative vocabulary of Malayam dialects", Journal of the Royal Asiatic Soc. of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, third series, 1902, p. 557-566; C. Otto Blagden, "Further notes on a Malayam comparative vocabulary", Journal of the Royal Asiatic Soc. of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, third series, 1903, p. 167-179.
- [Anon.] 1855? English-Zulu manuscript vocabulary, 2 vols. Johannesburg: Strange Collection of Africana, South African Public Library.
This was "probably made by Silas McKinney about 1855 from a vocabulary used by new missionaries and originally prepared by Lewis Grout, David Rood and Silas McKinney" (Doke 1959:17n71).
- [Anon.] 1862. A vocabulary of the Duala language, for the use of missionaries and others. Cameroons: Baptist Mission Press. Pp 63.
Johnston (1919:811) believes Alfred Saker may have compiled this.
- [Anon.] 1871. English and Secoana phrase book. Thaba 'Nchu (Orange Free State): Church Mission Press. Pp 56.
- [Anon.] 1876. Bakwiri vocabulary [Title and details wanting]. Baptist Missionary Soc.
Short vocabulary of Bakwiri mentioned briefly by Johnston (1919:811).
- [Anon.] 1877. Vocabulary of the Yao language. Manuscript, ref. 20874 MF. London: School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS).
- [Anon.] 1879. Dictionary of the English and Benga languages. New York: Mission House. Pp 151.
- [Anon.] 1879. A vocabulary of the Mpongwe language. By American missionaries at Gabon, West Africa. New York: Mission House. Pp 6, 54.
Issued anonymously -- John Leighton Wilson?
- [Anon.] 1881. Manuel de conversation en kiswahili. Bagamoyo: Mission de la Congrégation du Saint Esprit et du Saint-Coeur de Marie.
- [Anon.] 1883. Sarufi ya Kiswahili = Grammar of Swahili.
What's this? Source?
- [Anon.] 1885. Vocabulaire français-kiswahili et kiswahili-français. Alger.
- [Anon.] 1887. Syllabaire swahili. Mission Catholique de Zanzibar.
- [Anon.] 189x. First Mang'anja lessons. Blantyre: Mission Press. Pp 22.
What Mission Press?
- [Anon.] 189x. Mang'anja grammar. Blantyre: Mission Press. Pp 24.
What Mission Press?
- [Anon.] 1890. Phrase-book, Swahili-English. Universities' Mission to Central Africa (UMCA). Pp 68.
- [Anon.] 1891/95. A vocabulary of the languages of Chaga & Taveta, eastern equatorial Africa. Collected at the Church Missionary stations. Moshi (Tanganyika): Church Missionary Soc. (CMS). Pp 126.
Possibly this should be credited to Rev. Steggall.
- [Anon.] 1893. Syllabaire swahili. Mission Catholique de Zanzibar.
- [Anon.] 1893. Maelezo ya sarufi ya Kiswahili = Grammatical description of Swahili. Universities' Mission Press.

Referred to by Whiteley & Gutkind (1958).
- [Anon.] 19xx. Outline of Sukuma grammar. Catholic Mission at Mwanza, Tanganyika.
Referred to by Whiteley & Gutkind (1958). The author could be Fr.M. Köhnen.
- [Anon.] 19xx. A kiSukuma-English dictionary. Typescript. Mwanza (Tanganyika). Pp 185.
Polomé (1980:11) refers to two separate Sukuma-English manuscript dictionaries, one of which he credits to Rev. M. Loenen.
- [Anon.] 19xx. English-Kisukuma dictionary. Mwanza (Tanganyika): Literature Dept. of the Africa Inland Mission.
Contains "approximately 6,000 words" (Polomé 1980:11); see also Schoenbrun (1997:19).
- [Anon.] 19xx. Grammaire ki-sukuma. Miméographe.
Referred to by Whiteley & Gutkind (1958).
- [Anon.] 19xx. Grammar English-Kigwe (Sukuma). Unpublished typescript, ref. EAF CORY 268. Hans Cory Collection, Univ. of Dar es Salaam Library. Pp 63.

- Elliott, William Allan. 1897. Dictionary of the Tebele and Shuna languages, with illustrative sentences and some grammatical notes. Frome UK & London: Butler & Tanner. Pp xxxvii, 3, 441. The author "had lived among the Ndebele for fourteen years as a member of the London Missionary Soc. before producing it, and it is a much more ambitious project than either of its predecessors and some of its successors" (Fortune 1979:42f). The first part contains some 6,000 English entries with 'Tebele' and 'Shuna' translations. Then follows 'Tebele-English' and 'Shuna-English' parts. The vocabularies are "preceded by a grammatical outline ... and followed by a series of phrases divided into sections dealing with Travel, Cattle, Work, Buying, and the like" (Fortune 1979:43). "A reprint published 1897 omitted the last section, though leaving it referred to in the contents, and ended at page 398" (Doke 1945:82). The second edition of 1912 was retitled Notes for a Sindebele dictionary and grammar. - Gheel, Georgius de. 1651. Vocabularium latinum, hispanicum et congense. Romae.
- Reprinted in revised form 1928 as Les plus ancien dictionnaire bantu by J. van Wing & C. Penders. "The question as to whether Joris van Gheel was actually the author or but a copyist is discussed at some length in the introduction to the [revised reprint] ... There can be no doubt, however, that he copied a manuscript known to be in existence at the mission station of San Salvador before his arrival ... Though the dictionary is probably not the work of a single person, it is practically certain that in the main it is to be ascribed to Robodero, a Spaniard whose name is the only one mentioned in the original text" (Doke 1959:56).

- Revised reprint of Vocabularium latinum-hispanicum et congense, orig. published in 1651. "Unfortunately the present editors have not published the manuscript in the form in which it was written, viz. Latin-Spanish-Kongo, but have taken out the 7,000 odd Kongo words alphabetically, and then added French and Dutch equivalents. Since the publishing of such a work to-day is not of everyday practical worth, but of great value to students, such a method of handling the manuscript is the opposite of scientific" (Doke 1959:115).

Contains the manuscripts for what later ended up in his two-volume comparative work of 1919/22 (Anderson & Seton 1995:55).

Johnston, Harry Hamilton. 1919/22. A comparative study of the Bantu and semi-Bantu languages, 2 vols. Oxford: Clarendon Press. Pp xi, 819, map; xii, 544.

Johnston collected and systematized more or less all contemporary sources on the Bantu languages into a massive two-volume catalogue of Bantu features, incl. comparative word lists (for individual languages as well as thematic ones) and several thematic chapters on phonology, morphology, etc. The material he used came from published sources as well as his own field data and unpublished notes compiled (sometimes specifically for him) by G.L. Bates, Beba Bell, W.J.B. Chapman, C. Christy, J.F. Cunningham, Rev. R.D. Darby, J.H. Driberg, W. Fisher, W. Forfeitt, Rev. J.J. Fuller, Rev. R. Glennie, Rev. G. Grenfell, Rev. J. Griffiths, R.N. Botne (1999:507) gives the title as Grammatica de la lengua bubí, Fernando Poo, which appears to be an alternate title appearing somewhere on the book. It deals with the northern dialect at San Carlos and the western dialect at Concepcion. According to Doke (1945:3), this is "a model of what a Bantu grammar should not be. It would weary to give the many instances of this which one might quote. Let two suffice. In the first place he entirely missed the significance of the noun classes, calling the noun prefixes 'articles' as the Spanish 'el', 'la', 'lo', 'los' and 'las'. On page 20, for instance, he sets out four ways of forming plurals in Bube: (i) by adding a word of quantity, e.g. 'chobo' > 'chobo nkenke'; (ii) by inflexion, i.e. 'bompo' > 'bempo'; (iii) by inflexion and addition, e.g. 'eria' > 'biria'; and (iv) by change of word ("por cambio de Palabra"), 'lottó' > 'mattó'. In the second place, his verb classifications are hopelessly mixed; in one of these (page 61) he makes the division into auxiliary, regular, irregular, reflexive, reciprocal and impersonal, showing no grasp of the principle of verbal derivation."

Says Welmers (1971:564f): "For this remarkable accomplishment, at his own request, Koelle was permitted the less than princely period of six months free from other duties ... Though some of his notes may have been taken before this six-month period of full-time work, one can only be struck by the sheer enormity of the task of manuscript preparation ... His map alone, and the questions he asked to get the information on which it is based, is a masterpiece of meticulous attention to detail ... Although Koelle's unparalleled work falls somewhat short of contemporary standards in linguistics - his fairly flexible phonetic transcription cannot be expected to be fully accurate for all languages, and he understandably failed to recognize tone, although he marked what he heard as stress - it is nevertheless useful to the comparativist today, and remains a model of careful research." "Binns revised the spelling and arrangement, and omitted Arabic and Latin references. Though he did not include any explanation of the orthography he used, his work does not deserve the severe censure of Canon Hellier who wrote 'Unfortunately this dictionary [i.e. the first edition from 1882] was re-edited in 1925, and completely spoiled in the process'" (Doke 1945:55f).

 Details wanting. The second edition of 1893 was supplemented with a grammar and an English-Sesuto dictionary part. This English-Sesuto part was later revised by H. Dieterlen and appeared in various editions (3rd 1904; 4th 1911; 5th 1924; 6th 1937). The Sesuto-English section was later revised by A. Casalis and also appeared in a variety of editions (2nd 1905; 3rd 1908; 4th 1911; 5th 1925). See Doke (1945:91).

- This is part of Meinhof's article "Linguistische Studien in Ostafrika. Teil 14: Makua". It's a French-Makua vocabulary based on the Tugulu dialect containing c.600 words. Meinhof found this vocabulary, dated November 1790, in the library of the Seminar für Orientalische Sprachen in Berlin. "Elsewhere it contained the name of Charles Mylius, who was probably the author" (Doke 1959:4).

Merrick did not seem to have a sound appreciation of the noun class system" (Doke 1959:24). Merrick's manuscript was later edited and published by Saker in 1852.

- Not sure about the Latin title. The original edition by Pallas (1786/89) did not please Empress Catherine II, and a new editor was swiftly instructed to re-edit the work. Mirievot "managed to do everything required, quickly and precisely ... In this dictionary, words from all languages were mixed and arranged in alphabetical order - according to the Russian alphabet" (Olderogge 1993:114). Pallas' first edition had included no African languages, but this one contains specimens from 33 African languages (cf. Olderogge 1993), e.g. Coptic, Shilha Berber, Malagasy (or, 'Arabic of Madagascar Island'), Ful, Wolof ('Yalof'), Manding, Yalunka, Kikongo, Kamba, Xhosa ('Kaffir'), Khoekhoe. Many of the West African vocabularies were apparently lifted from Oldendorp (1777).

"This second edition, several copies of which are still extant, is a considerable advance upon the first. Certain additions and corrections were made by Maria, and there were included three pages of 'Observationes in legendo idiomate angollae' in preface, as well as two pages dealing with the 'cases' of nouns and pronouns and the numerals, near the end of the book. The notes explaining the pronunciation and spelling brought in Portuguese and Italian for comparison, and Portuguese orthography was used ... in the final paragraphs he records the existence of semantic tone (back in 1661!) without fully realizing what it was" (Doke 1959:52).

- This is the second edition of the first edition's first part (1941), and it lacks the vocabulary. My copy says 1958 while the preface is dated August 1946. Since the dates in older publications often refer to reprints (and not necessarily revisions), I opted for the latter date. I have also seen the year 1960 in some bibliographies (e.g. Gowell 1984).

- Based on a manuscript written by Merrick (1849). "The 'elements of grammar' are treated under the heading of orthography, etymology and syntax in 47 pages, in a very clear and accurate manner ... Following the grammatical part are the first thirty-three Psalms (Mienge) and a vocabulary, of which Part I, Dualla and English, occupies 37 pages, while Part II, English and Dualla, of two pages, only reaches the word 'accède'. Meinhof [1899:142] did not express a high opinion of Saker's work. Probably he did not study it closely, for it is certainly a meritorious production, considering the time in which it was written" (Doke 1959:23).

- "The special feature of this dictionary was the inclusion of a great deal of ethnographic information upon words and customs recorded. Numerous idiomatic sentences and aphorisms illustrate the entries. Scott made a most valuable contribution in this cyclopaedic emphasis in his book, which is only marred by what have come to be called 'Scottisms' (Chi-Scott) in his choice and inclusion of derivatives" (Doke 1945:68). Hullquist (1988:153) says that many "words in the dictionary are now archaic and unrecognized by many Chichewa speakers." Some bibliographies date this erroneously 1872. - Kisutu is "spoken in Southern Tanganyika between the Upper Rufiji, on the north, and the Upper Rovuma, on the south ... The grammar preceding the vocabularies deals only with Ngoni" (Doke 1945:54). Johnston (1919:792) refers to the second language in the title as "Sutu or Manundi (Nindi)" which could indicate that it is Nindi N102, but his geographical location seems a bit off (but then his geographical locations sometimes are).
- Springer, H.E. [Mrs]. 1905. Hand-book of Chikaranga or the language of Mashonaland. Cincinnati OH: Jennings & Graham. Pp 106.
- Includes a 24-page grammatical outline followed by English-Chikaranga and Chikaranga-English vocabularies. "Though based on Manyika, this work contained many words of Zezuru" (Doke 1945:99). The author "chose to call the language Chikaranga because she was sure it was the same language as had been spoken in the Makaranga kingdom described by the Portuguese" (Fortune 1979:43).

- "Emin Pasha, when Governor of Equatoria, compiled a number of vocabularies ... [When he] returned to take service in German East Africa he inscribed some interesting vocabularies of the Nyanza and Ituri forest languages, which after long concealment were brought to light and published recently through the energy of Bernhard Struck" (Johnston 1919:13); see Struck (1910). The language referred to as Baamba apparently represents the only illustration of a variety Johnston (1919:484) calls a "hotch-potch" of several other languages. It was "recorded through the intermediary of an interpreter [and] is more like some jargon or compromise" (Johnston 1919:806).

"This book has been carried out with scholarly approach in many respects. Dealing with phonetics and the noun, it contains much new material and many valuable

- suggestions. The detailed treatment of Zulu prefixal formatives is especially meritorious. It is a valuable book of reference. It is seriously marred, however, by its arbitrary statement of 'phonetic laws', occupying pages 9 to 43, by which, for purposes of etymological gymnastics, any one sound is proved to be equal to practically any other. As an instance of this faulty treatment of sound-shifting, Wanger shows <ɔ> to be equal, in turn, to <ɔ>, <gcw>, <ɔ>, <nd>, <ɔb>, <ɔh>, <nh>, <ɔj>, <ɔj>, <ɔm>, <ɔp>, <ɔq>, <ɔnq>, <ɔs>, <ɔb>, <ɔts>, <ɔtsh>, <ɔv> and <ɔy>. Building on such impossible premisses as these, Wanger then introduced extensive comparisons with ancient Sumerian, further spoiling his grammar with the thesis of a Sumerian derivation for Zulu and indeed all Bantu" (Doke 1945:78f). Three volumes were apparently planned but only one seems ever to have been published.

It chucked out all phonetic characters, replacing them with digraphs, and unfortunately "nothing was done to preserve certain vital phonetic distinctions" (Tucker 1971:627; cfr also Fortune 1993:123). A further revision appeared 1967.

Vertaald en uitgevet van Arnout Leers. Rotterdam.

A Dutch "translation of Leo Africanus' account of Northern Africa. To fill up the volume, an anonymous editor added to the account a brief conventional description of the coasts of Guinea (p. 289-307), based on current Portuguese and Dutch navigational manuals, and ten pages of notes on contemporary Dutch commercial procedure in Guinea and related matters (p. 308-18), most probably taken direct from manuscript sources. At the end of the notes appears a single vocabulary (p. 319), comprising the numerals 1-10 and nearly forty other terms; there is no introduction or explanation other than the bald title 'Woorden in de Cameronis, Rio d'Eley en 't hooge land van Ambosus'" (Hair 1969:49). The language seems similar to present-day Duala.

- Barbot, Jean. 1688. Description de la cote d'Affrique depuis le Cap Bojador jusques à celui de Lopo Gonzalvez. Manuscript, ref. ADM 7/830 A and B. London: Public Record Office.
- Barbot wrote down a general account of what he had learned during his West African travels. It was completed 1688, but never published. (An English translation appeared 1732.) It includes brief specimens of several languages, e.g. "Kishi-Koïngw and a dialect of north-west Cameroons, probably Barundw" (Johnston 1919:2), plus Wolof, Serer, Manding, 'Fida and Ardra' (i.e. Ewe), and others. "Barbot plagiarized heavily from Dapper [1668] and Bosman [1704]" (Hair 1967:257). There are several subsequent editions and reprints of Barbot's original account.

Translated from French. London: A. & J. Churchill. Pp 716, 6.
- Translated by the author himself. The translation was never finished, however, and was subsequently published more or less as-is by the Churchill brothers (Law 1982).

- Blagden, Charles Otto. 1902. A comparative vocabulary of Malayam dialects. Journal of the Royal Asiatic Soc. of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, 1902, p. 557-566.
- The author looks at a 19th-century manuscript originating from Malaysia, which contains lexical material from six "Malayan dialects" written down in Arabic script.
- One of these, Makuah or Makuat, Blagden refers to as "rather a mystery", and he has "suspicions as to its genuineness" (p. 558). The language is in fact Makhuwa. It appears here on six pages of tables together with specimens from the other languages. The origin of the original manuscript seems somewhat obscure.

- Having received a corrective letter from Mr Sidney H. Ray, Blagden comes to realize that his mystery language is not Asian, but in fact East African (i.e. Makhuwa). Ray's letter is reproduced in full here, and contains, for instance, a table comparing the Makhuwa items from Blagden's previous article with words drawn from Chauncey Maples' Collections for a handbook of the Makua language.

Bleek, Wilhelm Heinrich Immanuel. 1857. Researches into the relations between the Hottentot and the Kafir races [pt. 2]. Cape monthly magazine, v. 1, p. 289-296.

Note the slightly different title compared to part 1.

Bleek, Wilhelm Heinrich Immanuel. 1858. Catalogue of the Library of His Excellency Sir George Grey, v. 1, pt. 1-3. London & Leipzig: Trübner & Co.

This is where Bleek first uses the term "Bantu". Part 1 covers South Africa (within the limits of British influence), part 2 covers Africa (north of the Tropic of Cancer), and part 3 covers Madagascar. The first part includes "The family of sex-denoting languages: South African species, 1: the Hottentot language" and "The family of sex-denoting languages: South African species, 2: the Bushman language". Reprinted at least once.

- The vocabulary part contains numerals (and more?) from 31 African languages, e.g. Empoongwa B11a, Sheckan B21, Kaylee B20?, Oongoomo B22b, Oongabai B20?, Garangi (Mande?), Kong, Callana, Garman, Fobee (Fon?), Adampi (Gbe?), Tambi (?), Tembu (?), Ashantee, Fantee, Booroom (?), Inta (Guang?), Aowin (Anyi), Amanahoa (Nyo Kwa), Ahanta, Affootoo (Efut?), Inkra (Fante), Acra (Fante), Kerrapay (Gbe?), Badagry (Gbe?), Dagwhumba (Gbe?), Mosee (Gbe?), Inwa (Gbe?), Kumsallahoo (Gbe?), Bornu, Maiha (Kanuri?), Mallowa (Hausa?), Quollaliffa (Hausa?), Kallaghee (Bade). "A few Malemba [Kikongo] words occur as glosses in Bowdich's Ashantee vocabulary. At first I thought these represented the language of the River Malimba, near the Cameroons. They seem, however, to coincide more with the Malemba of Smith [cfr Tuckey 1818]" (Latham 1847:190). Reprinted 1966 by Frank Cass & Co. in London, edited and introduced by W.E.F. Title and details wanting. Büchner travelled in Central Africa during 1878-1882. He compiled several vocabularies which are mentioned by Johnston (1919:800ff), e.g. Shinji H35, Minungo K11, Kioko K11, Luba L31, presumably also Lunda L52, and others. Not sure of these were ever published (though Johnston claims they were).

- "Calunga is an Afro-Brazilian 'secret language' spoken mainly in and around Patrocínio, a rural city located in the region of the Triângulo Mineiro in the Brazilian state of Minas Gerais ... Even though its origins and evolution is unclear, Calunga speech has shifted grammatically in the direction of the regional variety of Brazilian Portuguese Vernacular ... Its current lexicon, however, points to three possible Bantu languages from the Congo/Angola region of West Africa: Kimbundu, Umbundu, and Kikongo" (quoted from LinguistList 17-612, 2006).

- Contains a "Français-Mogialoua-Abunda-Congo" vocabulary. 'Mogialoua' refers to Ndongo H21a (Doke 1959:6). 'Abunda' seemingly refers to Mbunda K15 while 'Congo' is Kikongo H16a (cfr Johnston 1919:802). "Although his records of Bantu languages are very jumbled and full of inaccuracies, still they are not as apocryphal as they were afterwards esteemed. Douville not only mentions some of the principal language groups in Añgôla and the western Congo, but realizes through Portuguese information the importance of the Luba family beyond" (Johnston 1919:4). According to Latham (1847:190f), "Douville's voyage to Congo is a literary imposture, being concocted at Brazil. Nevertheless, his three vocabularies represent Congo languages ... Three other vocabularies, however, following the Congo ones, and named Ho, Bomba and Salo, are, I think, like the rest of the work - fictions. They are more like French or Latin than any language in Africa. Possibly they were, in some cases, excogitated by disguising French and Latin roots." Douville's vocabularies are reproduced in full by Latham (1847:191.) There's a recent publication/reprint titled Viajes a Buenos Aires, 1826 y 1831, published 1984 by Emecé Editores at Bueno Aires (ISBN-10 950-04-0391-9), which may or may not include the contents of Douville's Voyage au Congo.

"The questionnaires indicate that the Bomitaba use their own language almost exclusively in their daily lives in the home and the village. The official language, French, is mostly used in schools and with government officials. Lingala, the national (trade) language for northern Congo, is spoken by the Bomitaba more than French in their contacts with non-Bomitaba. I believe that a single vernacular literacy project for the Bomitaba, in the Northern (Matoko) dialect, or alternatively the Central (Epena) dialect, would be useful and desirable" (quoted from SIL's webpage).

Hair, Paul Edward Hedley. 1967. Ethnolinguistic continuity on the Guinea coast. Journal of African history, v. 8, 2, p. 247-269.

"An inventory of ethnolinguistic units on the Guinea coast can be drawn from early written sources, that is, from Portuguese and other European records of between 1440 and 1700. When this inventory is compared with the present-day inventory it is found that, in the particulars cited, the units have remained very much the same for three, four, or five centuries" (quoted from the summary, p269). The article was reprinted 1997 in Africa encountered (Variorum/Ashgate Publishing), an anthology of various papers by Hair.

Hair, Paul Edward Hedley. 1969. The earliest vocabularies of Cameroons Bantu. African studies, v. 28, 1, p. 49-54.

Compares two seventeenth century word lists (Africanus 1665, Dapper 1668) with lexical items from modern Duala, Isuwu and Mokpe. "It would seem ... [that] the seventeenth century language is most probably an earlier form of Duala, while the possibility cannot be ruled out that it is the same language from which Isuwu and Mokpe, and conceivably all other Duala-group languages, have also derived" (p51).

Hair, Paul Edward Hedley. 1969. An ethnolinguistic inventory of the Lower Guinea coast before 1700 [pt. 2]. African language review, v. 8, p. 225-236.

This part focuses on 'Kru', Gibi-Bassa, Kra, Grebo, 'Quaqua', Akan, Gã-Adangme, Ewe, Yoruba, 'Benin', 'Warri', Urhobo, Ijo, Ibibio, Igbo, and Duala. Reprinted 1997 in Africa encountered (Variorum/Ashgate Publishing), an anthology of various papers by Hair.

Hale, Horatio Emmons. 1846. Ethnography and philology: United States exploring expedition during the years 1838, 1839, 1840, 1841, 1842, under the command of Charles Wilkes, U.S.N. Philadelphia: Lea & Blanchard. Pp xii, 666.

This is somehow part of Narrative of the United States exploring expedition during the years 1838, 1839, 1840, 1841, 1842, a 5-volume travel journal usually credited to Charles Wilkes and first published 1844 (and of which there exist several abridged and condensed editions). Possibly Hale's Ethnography and philology is supplementary to those, unless it is included in them. At any rate, Hale's title contains various ethnographic notes and vocabularies (or parts thereof), most of which deal with American peoples and languages. There are also wordlists from 13 African languages, collected in "Rio de Janeiro from native Africans living there as slaves" (Fodor 1980:127), e.g. Eyo/Nago (= Yoruba), Kambinda H16, Mundjola H16, Kongo H16, Angola H21a, Bengera R11, Makua P31, Mudjana P21, Makonde P23, Takwani P32, Masena N41?/N44?, Sofala S15, and Nyambana S16?. There's also supposed to be a Maviha vocabulary in here somewhere (cf Doke 1945:54). Reprinted 1968 by Gregg Press in Ridgewood NJ. Also available on microfiche from the Canadian Inst. for Historical Microreproductions (CIHM microfiche series, #35669).

Says Johnston (1919:796): "The Karaña speech of South Central Zambezia is probably the earliest recorded of all Bantu languages, words of it appearing in Portuguese records of East African exploration as early as 1505, and thence onwards to about 1760. These words have been carefully gleaned from such such records by R.N. Hall, the Warden of Zimbabwe, and transmitted to me in MS. in 1907, together with a comparison of them and modern Ci-karaña."

"The first part of this work consists of a bibliography and a rather imprecise outline of the sounds occurring in the languages dealt with. The body of the work is made up of long lists of words from some 70 languages and dialects under the heading of starred roots ... The inadequacy of the transcription used in a large number of cases impairs the value of the material even as a source for those who cannot consult the original works" (Guthrie 1971:113).

Ibn al-Faqīh. 0903. Kitāb al-buldān.

Includes "the oldest recorded Bantu word for 'God' ... Imklwglw [in the language of the Zang, East Africa]" (Doke 1960:27). The date refers to a now lost first version. "It had been originally an encyclopedia of the Muslim world in five volumes, but the extant text is an abridged version (mukhtasar), made in 413/1022 by 'Ali al-Shayzari" (Levtzion & Hopkins 1981:26). Ibn al-Faqīh borrowed much from the works of earlier authors. His "original contribution is the description of a route from Ghana to Egypt" (Levtzion & Hopkins 1981:26). Later geographers, such as al-Muqaddasī, criticized Ibn al-Faqīh's work for "its imprecise geographical information and a number of irrelevant digressions" (Encyclopedia of Islam III:761, new ed.).

The manuscript in question is "located in the library of Leiden Univ. under the class-mark 'ms. BPL 927'. It was acquired at an auction in March 1869. Hardly anything is known about its origin" (Jones 1995:3). It was seemingly written sometime during 1642-1655. It contains a "hotch-potch of navigational, commercial, ethnographic and linguistic information" (idem:3), e.g. descriptions of the Lower Guinea Coast as well as the coast from Cape Lopez to Loango, a description of São Tomé, an ethnographic description of Benin, several lists of merchandise, and a variety of miscellaneous bits and pieces, including three wordlists (idem:203-232). The languages in the wordlists are similar to present-day Duala, Myene, and Twi/Fante.

"This paper shows that the number of languages in Namibia, as it happens with the linguistic diversity of many countries, is a range (10 to 31) whereby the margin of error (+/-21) is greater than the minimum count (10) ... the morphological behaviour of language names, or glossonyms, as well as the way these can be grouped, were to a large extent responsible for this pattern ... the minimum count relates to the use of glossonyms in the media, while the maximum count relates to their use in the education system" (quoted from the abstract).
